

Woods Hole Research Center

The Woods Hole Research Center conducts research and policy development on numerous environmental issues, with a primary mission to combat global warming. The Center's new headquarters will include 26.4 kilowatts of photovoltaics, an energy monitoring system for educational purposes, and a ground source heat pump. The project also includes numerous energy efficiency and green building elements.

For more information, contact:
Robert Barry
508-540-9900

